

Executing a critical mission. In helping to keep aircraft moving safely through America's airways, we are solving problems that matter. We are protecting passengers' well-being. Supporting business and military operations. And strengthening global commerce. It is a 24/7 watch — one fueled by the urgency of our task and the inherent magnitude of its scope. We accomplish our daily mission through professionalism in every facet of our organization. Personal pride in performance. Leadership at every level. And putting our knowledge and experience to use in the service of others, safeguarding the nation's skies.

Accepting the mantle of stewardship. It is more than just doing our job and doing it well. The essential systems and services upon which our nation's air traffic depends are varied and complex. Radar, navigation, communications, telecommunications, weather, power and automation, among others. Each requires our skilled analysis and attention to continue operating at maximum efficiency. Through careful management of available resources, we maintain all the systems under our charge at the highest possible level of readiness. When called upon to respond, we consistently prove ourselves to be among the most highly qualified and dedicated in the industry. We accept the challenge.

With as many as 6,000 aircraft aloft at any given moment, optimum systems performance is mandatory.
